My dear Scott:-

Which I shall be glad to help you unreservedly in the matter of my mounted birds it occurs to me on thinking over the matter that I cannot let you have them that you want immediately without first making a definite written agreement with you, or with Mr. Agassiz, or with you both, as to the final disposal of the entire collection. This, I am sure, will strike you as eminently proper and, indeed, necessary. Of course I could not allow you to take the price of the collection and leave the remainder on my hands. There are some that I should myself discard but the bulk of the collection must go ~~together~~ together in the end.

Then, too, I must be first assured that the specimens will be in some way protected against the effects of the light. I have protected them too long & too carelessly to be willing to see them faded out in a few years.
There are still other points that I must consider & guard against.
Your present needs, however, can be easily provided for. I should think, by the temporary loan of such specimens as you want & I can spare pending our final agreement. On these terms you can have them at short notice.

Very sincerely
William Brewster.

My dear Scott:

I am glad to know by your letter of yesterday that you hope to secure funds sufficient to pay your indebtedness to the Museum employees by Sept. 1st Behave me it will not do to temporize now, in view of the position in which you have placed Mr. Agassiz, will the prospect of future large subscriptions answer the present exigency.

It would be indeed a shame and a better disarrangement to all concerned in it to have your enterprise fail at this stage, but if it is to go on the present complications must be speedily and wholly disposed of.

Yours sincerely

William Brewster
